Statement by Jim Dyke, TV Watch executive director, on indecency complaints to the FCC dropping by 98 percent in the 2nd quarter of 2005

"If the number of complaints has plummeted then perhaps the Parents Television Council has gone through a downsizing since almost all the complaints the FCC receives originate with that one organization.

"Most Americans prefer to decide for themselves what they will watch on TV, and they know that parents should determine what their kids see not the government."
